New Report: Land Use Reforms Can Break Cycle of American Environmental Racism

These regulations belong to the Agritourism, Farmland Protection, and Home Occupations collections. In the past decade, many of these localities have taken steps to use their authority over local land use, planning, zoning, and public health and welfare to reduce pollution and the cumulative burdens borne by environmental justice communities, spurred by the demands of resident-advocates.

State Incentives for Local Abundant Housing Policy

Participants collectively defined regulatory regimes and identified outcome criteria reflecting ethical and normative concerns.

The United States needs a new Syria policy

Agricultural districts have been used in 14 states and are valuable even if participation in a district is voluntary and does not prevent an owner from converting to non-farm use.

Corey Johnson Proposes New Land Use Plan

The department is working to ensure that State significant projects in NSW are supported by better assessment, better coordination and better engagement.
