STUDIES IN THE AUTECOLOGY OF CLADIUM MARISCUS R.BR., New Phytologist

ESRI on-line story map publication.

Reconstruction of climate change during the Holocene in western and central Europe based on pollen records of indicator species

Summary curves were made for human activity anthropogenic indicators distinguished according to Behre 1981 , as well as Van der Linden and Van Geel 2006. Our dates correlate well with the palaeoecological results from other sites in Europe.

Vegetation of Freshwater Habitats

Clado-cera living in open water are represented by only one species, Bosmina longirostris, whose frequency is notably low, with a maximum 4 %.

Studies in the Post

Cuspidata, in the middle S. The development trend of vegetation is noted during the upper part of Phase LLp-I7 Fig. In order to obtain the remains of the Cladocera fauna deposited in the Table 2 Radiocarbon dates Core Depth cm Dated material Lab.

Vegetation of Freshwater Habitats

The pollen analytical data suggest only minor human impact on the local vegetation during the two settlement phases.

Vegetation of Freshwater Habitats

Later Singh and Smith 1973 published detailed work on the later post-glacial vegetational history of the Lecale area in association with relative land and sea level changes.

Relationship between recent pollen spectra and current vegetation around the cerin peat bog (Ain, France)

Cladium mariscus grew in the rush zone, but it is not found any more in the Linowek area.
