-- Readings

RISE OF URBAN SOCIOLOGY

- EMILE DURKHEIM: was appointed to the first chair of sociology at the Sorbonne in Paris in 1883. He also wrote about the changes brought about by industrialization. In his work The Division of Labor in society, Durkheim discussed many of the same issues presented earlier by Tönnies. This time under the labels of mechanical solidarity and organic solidarity. In the preindustrial village, individuals were held together by the mechanical bonds of kinship and social interdependence—mechanical because they were predetermined and could not be changed as long as the individual remained within the local village. In the industrial city, individuals were no longer bound by the mechanical bonds of kinship; instead they could work at new types of jobs and have greater opportunities for interaction with a wider range of people.

The City Reader

In addition to newly commissioned selections by Yasser Elsheshtawy, Peter Taylor, and Lawrence Vale, new selections in the sixth edition include writings by Aristotle, Peter Calthorpe, Alberto Camarillo, Filip DeBoeck, Edward Glaeser, David Owen, Henri Pirenne, The Project for Public Spaces, Jonas Rabinovich and Joseph Lietman, Doug Saunders, and Bish Sanyal. New York, NY: Routledge, 2004. However, the large amount of time that has since elapsed, along with the vast changes that have occurred in the urban world, in the field of urban sociology, and in my own thinking on this subject, has led to this fresh new book.
