Ten Interesting Facts and Figures about the Barbican in the City of London

Both were, like St John Street, just over a mile from St Giles, so it would have been easy enough for John and Elizabeth to get there. It comprised those parts of St Giles that lay outside the City of London, and there were already some 3,000 houses in the area.

Indeed, they became employers in their own right.

Accommodation

Thus Rosetta travelled with her son Henry, his father Marsh and her husband Madden. She made various individual bequests, and even so an inventory valued her remaining possessions at nearly £50.

The Barbican

Perhaps a Mrs Newbank became almost a surrogate mother who helped bring up the young family, and Rosetta told Rebecca about her. That may have reflected his status as the son of a yeoman rather than because he held sufficient land in his own right.
