Nigeria

The great extension of Islam within present-day Nigeria dates from the nineteenth century. Indigenous law and procedure adopts a common sense as opposed to a legalistic approach to problem solving. Sanctions were also meted out on individuals, families etc, that acted in ways contrary to custom and traditions, especially ways likely to cause strife and bloodshed.

12 Principles of Indigenous Philosophy

In the 17th century, Europeans began establishing ports to participate in the trade of many commodities, and especially slaves.

Indigenous Communities and Community Development Principles in South

This paper is motivated by this scenario to look for ways of improving the course of indigenous communities through optimal use of their unharnessed potentials for socio-economic development. While there could be slight variation in the principles of criminology across African cultural boundaries, nevertheless the principles are virtually the same.

CRIME AND PUNISHMENT IN AFRICAN INDIGENOUS LAW

Nigeria also has the most number of Catholic priests in the whole of Africa. Matters that cannot be handled at this level will move to the umunna. Adult men in the extended family or umuada married daughters of the family and if necessary Amala Village tribunal.
