The average bolida is 7 feet long and weighs 350 pounds. In any serious future conventional conflict, even between opponents as mismatched as Imperial Japan was against the United States—or Poland with one thousand tanks currently is against Russia with twelve thousand—it is space power that will prove decisive. From a thread on SFConSim-12007 However, culture only goes so far.

Race and Grafts: All creatures have a race entry. Stripped down by removing all cargo capacity, much crew space, and all other less-than-essential facilities, and enhancing their fuel capacity with multiple drop tanks, it became possible to clamp a small number of light units — overstocked with fuel and supplies — to the spine of such a vessel, and have it haul them slowly and painfully to a target system. In either case the limit of self replicating spacecraft is ultimately arms limitation treaties.
