Chapter Outline

The Act created separate primary schools 5-11 and secondary schools 11-15. The school leaving age had been raised to 11 in 1893, 12 in 1899 and then to 14 in 1921.

History of education in Japan

Most schools adopt a three-semester system, with the first semester from April to August, the second semester from September to December, and the third semester from January to March. The early postwar years were a time of massive rebuilding.

History

Shinto is more concerned with this life and its followers frequently pray for things they need or desire.

History of education in Japan

During this period, a number of universities were founded by Christian missionaries, who also took an active role in expanding educational opportunities for women, particularly at the secondary level. Since World War II, business and government have maintained extremely close ties.
