The Complete Works of Bret Harte

CANTO III I Where the sun sinks through leagues of arid sky, Where the sun dies o'er leagues of arid plain, Where the dead bones of wasted rivers lie, Trailed from their channels in yon mountain chain; Where day by day naught takes the wearied eye But the low-rimming mountains, sharply based On the dead levels, moving far or nigh, As the sick vision wanders o'er the waste, But ever day by day against the sunset traced: II There moving through a poisonous cloud that stings With dust of alkali the trampling band Of Indian ponies, ride on dusky wings The red marauders of the Western land; Heavy with spoil, they seek the trail that brings Their flaunting lances to that sheltered bank Where lie their lodges; and the river sings Forgetful of the plain beyond, that drank Its life blood, where the wasted caravan sank. CALIFORNIA'S GREETING TO SEWARD 1869 We know him well: no need of praise Or bonfire from the windy hill To light to softer paths and ways The world-worn man we honor still. A blush, a sigh, and end of Canto II.

We fit archival quality clear acrylic covers for additional protection whenever possible. FURTHER LANGUAGE FROM TRUTHFUL JAMES NYE'S FORD, STANISLAUS, 1870 Do I sleep? The Church, of course, had its own views Of who were worthiest to use The magic spring; but the prior claim Fell to the aged, sick, and lame. Once more I see Portala's cross uplifting Above the setting sun; And past the headland, northward, slowly drifting, The freighted galleon.

Yet ere he was eight He had despoiled the classics; much he knew Of Sanskrit; not that he placed undue weight On this, but that it helped him with Hebrew, His favorite tongue. THE COPPERHEAD 1864 There is peace in the swamp where the Copperhead sleeps, Where the waters are stagnant, the white vapor creeps, Where the musk of Magnolia hangs thick in the air, And the lilies' phylacteries broaden in prayer. And this was the way it was.

As I said before, Having got the wolf, by the same high law We saved the lamb in the wolf's own jaw, And that's my moral.
