His cycle of the moon, furthermore, covers 21 years, at the end of which period the moon again occupies the same position in the week as at the beginning, but this can happen only once in 689,472 years, according to the common computation. A commentary upon it, by David Luria, is included in the Wilna edition, and another, by Abraham Broydé, in the Lemberg edition. He first persuaded Eve to eat of the fruit, which was a kind of wheat that grew on the most beautiful tree in the garden, and she gave some to Adam.

Zunz also raised another possibility: that the work was at one point complete, but that parts of it were lost in its early period. Despite the antiquity of this proto-tradition it is still not identical with the composition as it was created by the author.
