Set in the countryside outside Bordeaux, in a region of overwhelming heat and sudden storms, the novel's landscape reflects the inner world of Thérèse, a figure who has captured the imaginations of readers for generations. MacKenzie's translation of Therese Desqueyroux, the first since 1947, captures the poetic lyricism of Mauriac's prose as well as the intensity of his stream-of-consciousness narrative. MacKenzie also provides notes and a biographical and interpretive introduction to help readers better appreciate the mastery of François Mauriac, who was awarded the Nobel Prize in Literature in 1952.

François Mauriac's astonishing and daring novel is an unforgettable portrayal of a complex, fascinating woman trapped by provincial life. Through analysis of historical development of the Catholic novel, as well women's roles inside and outside of literature during and after World War I, this paper seeks to demonstrate that François Mauriac's representation of women is groundbreaking in comparison to literary works at the time.

Subsequent chapters, noting both differences as well as similarities, look specifically at the issues of gender and sexuality, the uses of religion and the role of the clergy, the function of uncertainty both as a narrative technique in Flaubert and as a thematic element in Mauriac , the role of minor characters and their relationships to the two eponymous heroines, and finally, the use by each novelist of photographs in order to undercut, rather than to underscore, any affection felt for the person whose image has been preserved. Edward Gallagher's examination and reflections on these two novels in tandem lead to a deeper appreciation and a better understanding of each novel. This paper will examine Thérèse's refusal of societal roles as wife and mother, as well as Mauriac's tone, in order to demonstrate the revolutionary portrayal of a monster as his protagonist.
