Reflection on mental health nursing Essay

This is a reflective essay based on my attendance at a multidisciplinary team (MDT) meeting whilst on my two-week placement at a local mental health day hospital. The aim of this essay is to discuss the importance of the multidisciplinary team within the mental health environment and discuss factors that can influence the success or failure of multidisciplinary teams.

Mental health is generally comprised of professionals such as psychiatrists, nurses, occupational therapists, social workers, but other therapists such as family therapists, psychotherapists and counsellors might also become involved in the care of the patient (Perkins & Repper 1998).

Multidisciplinary involvement is important within mental health nursing as people with mental health problems have multiple needs, so a variety of expertise is required to meet the needs of these people (Daly et al 1999).

Multidisciplinary mental health teams can be defined as:

"A group of practitioners with different professional training, employed by more than one agency, who meet regularly to coordinate their work providing services to one or more clients in a defined area" (Overeem 1998: 9)

The advantage of a multidisciplinary team approach is that all professionals work together by collecting the facts and by bringing information together, to obtain as complete a view as possible of the problems of each individual patient. In doing this they are able to make sure that the proper range of services is provided for each patient.

Caring for someone with dementia at home

Thus, for many people with AIDS, effective and efficient home- and community-based service delivery requires the kind of coordinated effort among medical, nursing, and support services providers that has been difficult to achieve for groups with other chronic illnesses or disabilities. At present, New York AIDS service providers have had little direct experience with managed care because most of their clients are covered by the Medicaid program, which has not yet started enrolling beneficiaries with AIDS in managed care.
