Exercising for mood regulation: The importance of experience

The added stress of running a household increases the likelihood that single black women will experience postpartum mood changes, caused by a last-minute DSM-5 change that occurred too late to implement in NESARC-III.

Depressive Symptomatology and Mental Health Help

Psychologists are encouraged to make efforts to help women and girls develop an improved sense of initiative and resilience, personal power, and expand non-stereotyped alternatives and choices. Black women are half as likely to receive mental health treatment and counseling as white women. African American abused women reported more excessive jealousy by partners.
