I cannot read 'anyone lived in a pretty how town' aloud without crying. It is now that I realize that they actually set it free.

Selected Poems by Mary Ruefle

I'm not so hot on Auden's brand of rhyming poetry. He is the best within his circle of poets.

Amy Lowell: Selected Poems

That her work has not yet won any major award is absurd. Stevenson, who was also awarded the 2007 Lifetime Achievement Award from the Lannan Foundation, was born in England to American parents, grew up in New England and in Ann Arbor, Michigan, and has spent most of her adult life in England. Just one look at one of his futuristic experiments with syntax and punctuation was more than enough to convince me that he was too difficult for me to read.

Mendelson thus suggests reading this edition first, and then the later revised versions second. Divinely light and calm Finishes the unfinished page.

Selected Poems by W.H. Auden

Flight I don't know if you're alive or dead. This little collection provided many lines I could read aloud and hear the birds singing.

Selected Poems by Harry Crosby

But as it turned out it was silly of me to give up on him. I am definitely going to make sure to read more of her poetry and also read a biography of her because her poetry seems very biographical and I felt I couldn't get all the references. He is always mentioned in films -Hanna and Her Sisters- and he has made an influence in poetry.
