

Training activities for teachers in higher education

Council for National Academic Awards - Faculty Development as an Authentic Professional Practice

The importance of level teaching:

The student's thinking develops well when dealing with one another, and only in interpersonal activities they learn to new concepts, learned to adapt to others, respecting others' ideas, and attitudes. During the lesson one can not stay out of work and everyone can contribute to the final result of the work.

Activities

Feel free to contact me offline. Deans, in particular, should be active sponsors of and knowledgeable about best practices in teaching.

Activities

Instructors are faced with the challenge of designing activities that support learning objectives and of structuring them to work online or face-to-face.

Activities

They are discussing, writing, debating, creating, discovering, processing, and involved in higher-order thinking for example, analysis, synthesis.

Activities

These activities are active learning activities, since the student takes a more active role.

Faculty Development as an Authentic Professional Practice

Synchronous sessions guide faculty through the process of redefining their role as instructor in their college courses, as they develop deeper understanding of how learning happens and how to support learning.
