After the breakdown of the Eastern Bloc, Poland joined the European Union as one of the first Central European countries. Despite being a member of the European Union, Poland has never been a member of the European Council or the European Council of Ministers. Not yet a member, the country had some input on the EU's New Treaty negotiations (1992–1993) and was a member of the European Economic Community (1993–2004). After a successful EU membership referendum in 2003, reflecting a great deal of scepticism and ambivalence, Poland became a member of the European Union and a member of the EU. The same year, while in the EC, Poland was at pains to develop a more coherent EU policy, which was reflected in the formation of the Ministry of Foreign Affairs. This strategy, however, did not last long. In 2004, Poland joined the European Union, the Visegrad Framework and with the other member states—through the Western Triangle, for example. This was a period of significant political, economic and social changes in the EU's east in the energy, society, economy, and defense, and the Eastern Partnership was established. The Polish government's foreign policy, based on realism and beliefs, was particularly during the Ukraine-Russia conflict of 2014–2015. Poland was one of the main initiators of the European Union's position on the conflict, and it was a subject of controversy within the EU, regarding the role of law standards that were violated by Russia and Warsaw's rejection of a resolution which would be the EU refugee and migrants policy. Keywords: Poland, European Union, EU, New Treaty, Lublin Treaty, Polish EU president, EU power sharing, rule of law, international relations
