A9 dualling proposals

June and July saw a series of online workshops conducted with a range of participants from across Scotland.

Climate change

It provides a plethora of scientific analyses, facts, figures, projections and advice to help ensure that Scotland is both prepared for and resilient to the impacts of climate change. Delegates at the workshop were invited to answer the draft questions to ensure that the questions, as written, were yielding useful answers and to also identify any areas not reflected which should be included in the User Survey.

Planning applications

I assume that all of the following areas have been altered in accordance with Transport Scotland Scheme Objectives TSSOs? We proactively seek to resolve issues prior to making a response, however on occasion, and only when necessary, will Transport Scotland recommend that the Planning Authority refuse planning permission. Which TSSO does this answer cover? At this stage, we expect to have a final IPM by mid-December 2020.

They were then waiting to see which option was going to be most sustainable in the long term before investing. This must include at least thirty days when schools are routinely open for children and young people. Ensure you write some sentences explaining how individuals benefit from your study.

National Standards for Community Engagement

It also has a reduced impact on the B9103.

The AI Of The Possible: Developing Scotland's Artificial Intelligence (AI) Strategy

This work developed the option designs, following feedback received since the June 2017 Public Consultation. In order to be of some assistance, I note the following which may address some of the wider issues that you raised in your request.

The AI Of The Possible: Developing Scotland's Artificial Intelligence (AI) Strategy

You can see more details about the draft IPM in our consultation document. Ultimately, by 2050 Scotland will be free from harmful tailpipe emissions from land transport, with other transport modes decarbonising at a slower pace, resulting in a healthier, more active population. Ian hoped they would enjoy their day and asked that delegates also provide feedback on other areas that might be addressed at a future time.
