Nursing Ethical Considerations

While the Green court did not endorse a specific timeframe for criminal conduct exclusions, it did acknowledge that permanent exclusions from all employment based on any and all offenses were not consistent with the business necessity standard. Whether the duration of an exclusion will be sufficiently tailored to satisfy the business necessity standard will depend on the particular facts and circumstances of each case.

The Act protects applicants and employees in several ways, for example, by: 1 providing a 60-day provisional period of employment for the prospective employee, pending the completion of the criminal records check; 2 providing an independent process to appeal or dispute the accuracy of the information obtained in the criminal records check; and 3 allowing the employee to remain employed subject to direct on-site supervision during the appeals process. Paul has also consistently obtained favorable appellate judgments for clients in the Oregon and Washington courts of appeal, as well as in the Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals.

When an informal or unscored selection procedure which has an adverse impact is utilized, the user should eliminate the adverse impact, or modify the procedure to one which is a formal, scored or quantified measure or combination of measures and then validate the procedure in accord with these guidelines, or otherwise justify continued use of the procedure in accord with Federal law. Most notably, Restatement Second of Torts §548, concerning fraudulent misrepresentation, insists that tort liability for misrepresentation requires that the party asserting liability has relied specifically on the truth of the representation upon which the claimed liability is based. Paul has authored countless briefs and motions that resulted in favorable opinions and outcomes for clients.

Standards of conduct, performance and ethics
