Gynecologic and Obstetric Emergencies

Aminoglycosides are associated with ototoxicity. Cultures of Gardnerella are not useful since it is also found in normal vaginal flora. Which of the following is the most appropriate next step in management? A 16-year-old female with history of ovarian cysts presents with right lower quadrant pain for 3 hours that started after dance class.

Gynecologic and Obstetric Emergencies

ED bedside ultrasound confirms an intrauterine pregnancy. In pregnancy, there is an increase in blood volume and a smaller increase in red blood cell mass leading to a dilutional anemia and a drop in the hematocrit. Valproate and other antiseizure medications have been associated with dysmorphic syndrome.

Gynecologic and Obstetric Emergencies

Ultrasound with Doppler sonography is the primary imaging modality for suspected ovarian torsion. She has an intrauterine device in place.

Obstetric and gynecologic emergencies

She cannot remember when her last menstrual period was because she is irregular. Lower abdominal pain lasting up to 12 hours is common 3—7 days after treatment and is thought to be secondary to methotrexate-induced tubal abortion or tubal distention due to hematoma formation.
