Through one porthole was the ebony sheen of black water against glass. The joint UN General Assembly resolution on 11 December 1975 endorsed establishment of a South Pacific nuclear-free-zone and enjoined all the countries concerned to carry forward consultations about ways and means of implementing the proposal. Later, in Papeete, one of the men said he had dreamed of the encounter and that it was a good omen.

Moruroa protest

The NGO's pressed for an end to the transshipment, storage and dumping of nuclear wastes in the pacific, the clean up and ongoing monitoring of contaminated sites and support for test site workers affected by nuclear testing especially in Te Ao Maohi, Christmas Island and the Marshall Islands.

At the time, I was studying the political context of New Zealand film and television at Auckland University.

Moruroa protest

France is not the only colonial power in the Pacific, Ounei-Small stressed.

Nuclear Testing Legacy Haunts Pacific Island Countries

It was the second encounter with whales for the crew of Chimera since leaving New Zealand, and everyone present was thrilled and stunned by the performance. Lange, however, was not to be convinced by the US and ANZUS ally Australian arguments about the need for extended nuclear deterrence to protect New Zealand: As far as I was concerned, deterrence in the South Pacific was more than dangerous, it was absurd.

Nuclear Testing Legacy Haunts Pacific Island Countries

Regular reporting of French Polynesian health statistics ceased in 1966, the year nuclear testing started. He put his arm round me and gave a great big smile for the camera.
